

Cambridge ZOOM Workshop (July 9-11, 2020)

FROM: Charlotte Lee, Clark Muenzer, and John H. Smith
TO: G-LPC Workshop Participants

We hope that you are all well and safe. We are writing to you now with the final details about our upcoming ZOOM event, which is scheduled for three 5-hour days from Thursday, July 9 through Saturday, July 11. Each day of the workshop will have presentations and discussions of six of your entries over 3 sessions, with 15-minute breaks scheduled throughout. Before the Thursday and Friday sessions begin, there will also be presentations by Clark, John, Charlotte, and Bryan about the new webpage, the upcoming publication of the first installment of G-LPC entries, and other milestones. Our last session on Saturday will be a roundtable where we hope to discuss prospects for cooperation and partnerships with the various institutions (so please try to attend and bring your ideas!)

In the schedule below you'll find we have organized the sessions into pairs of related concepts. Each of you will present a 5-minute summary and commentary of the other entry to initiate the discussion, which will continue for another 30 minutes. Both authors and our invited attendees are encouraged to participate. All entries will be shared via Google Drive on Friday, June 26th. If you don't receive or cannot access them, contact John Smith at jhsmith@uci.edu. Please don't forget to send us an outline of your planned response (perhaps in the form of relevant bullet points) no later than JULY 2nd. We'll review technical procedures right before the first session begins.

John Smith (University of California, Irvine) will be hosting the ZOOM meetings. Before the first day he will send you all an invitation with the "Meeting Room ID" and the password ("Goethe"). In the introductory remarks, we'll go over some procedural issues (muting/unmuting, "raising hands" for questions, chatting only with the host, keeping video on unless you need to step away, etc.). We assume almost everyone is now all too familiar with ZOOM's features. Anyone who is not can feel free to contact John in advance at: jhsmith@uci.edu.

Each day's meetings will begin and conclude at the following times. To avoid confusion, we suggest entering your own times for all activities when reviewing the schedule.
